High numbers of locals in First Release Sites sign up to get “NBN ready”

20 October 2010

A high proportion of houses and businesses within the Minnamurra and Kiama Downs first release site have signed up for a standard optical fibre installation at no charge.

NBN Co Head of Construction, Patrick Flannigan said locals were keen to ensure their properties were amongst the first in Australia to experience superfast broadband on the National Broadband Network.

“Some 74% of eligible premises within the first release site have signed up to make their property ‘NBN ready’.” he said.

“Such a strong response shows the local community has overwhelmingly embraced the rollout of the network.”

“Households and businesses that have returned their completed consent form will have a thin fibre optic cable installed by running a cable from the street to their premise.”

“Once the local network goes live, residents with the installed fibre optic cable will be able to choose superfast broadband services from a retail service provider and arrange for their premises to be connected to the NBN. However, by signing up, there is no obligation to order new services from retailers,” said Mr Flannigan.

The National Broadband Network project aims to make high-speed broadband available to all Australians – 93% by fibre, 4% via wireless and 3% via satellite, subject to final network design.

Construction of the network is underway at five locations on mainland Australia, including Minnamurra and Kiama Downs. In 2011, construction is scheduled to commence at a further 19 sites across Australia.
